

Week 13

This week we talked about the resurrection. I love reading about the resurrection, especially close to Easter. I feel like this is a really good time to reflect on what price is done for us through the Garden of Gethsemane and also the resurrection so that he overcame physical and spiritual death. Something that I think is interesting when reading about the resurrection is the amount of people that Jesus Christ personally showed himself after he was resurrected. it was almost as if he saw the struggles and the fears of each of these people and had the compassion on them to show himself individually to each one of them. even when he goes to the Nephites and visit them after his resurrection, he allows them to feel his sides and the prince in his hands one by one. this lesson helps solidify the way that Christ wants us to treat other people, and how we minister to them. he desires that we show compassion one by one unfocus on one person instead of trying to help everybody at once. Christ personally consoles and helps each and every one of those who turn to him. coming off of General Conference, this emotion was reflected in many of the general conference talks. a big pattern throughout the entire general conference was the 10 virgins. I feel like this relates a lot to the resurrection, and the second coming of Jesus christ. many of the people who saw him die did not believe that he would be resurrected again, misunderstanding the words and the lessons that he had taught them while he was alive. when he came back from the dead, many of those people who had not believed that he would rise again or not prepared and were surprised by when it came. one of those people is Thomas. Thomas would not believe that Jesus Christ Rose from the grave and would come to show himself to 12 Apostles. He doubted that anybody could come back from the dead. something that I thought was interesting that the chosen did was add a character that's not in the bible. this character was to be Thomas's wife, and is later killed by a Roman soldier during a commotion. with that background, it makes sense why there would be an unbelief. the Thomas from the Bible most likely also had a backstory as to why he wouldn't believe that Christ would be Resurrected. whether it was a loved one who was not helped by christ, or maybe he was sympathetic with the Sadducees, or he just didn't believe, but in the end because of the worldly beliefs or the experiences that you went through swayed him to not believe, he was ever more guilty when Christ actually came back from the dead Insurance himself unto them. What are the parts that I love about this is when he appears to the two disciples on the road. he purposely veiled himself so that they don't know who it is that they're talking with, but Jesus talks to them like he talked to them when he was alive expounding the scriptures and teaching about his father's Doctrine. then Christ finally reveals himself unto them, and they realize that this whole time they felt a light in their souls and felt the Light of Christ when Christ was walking with them. This is how we should be when we are ministering to others, and have the righteousness to shine our Light of Christ unto everybody that we talk to. by doing this we will spread God's message faster than anything else we could do.
